

Positive Steps for Kids

Teaching social skills to children and adolescents with special needs

This program is for children and adolescents with autism and other special needs who have difficulty understanding social cues and developing friendships. The goal is to teach kids the social skills they need to make new friends and have successful community experiences.

The program offers social groups designed to meet the different needs of children and adolescents who range in age from 5 to 15.

Sessions are held once a week at our Randolph campus and include structured lessons, social games, video modeling, role playing, and parent training.

We use an applied behavior analysis (ABA) approach to teach social skills. Hundreds of studies have shown that ABA is the most effective method to help individuals with special needs improve all skills, including social skills.

Our social groups focus on:

- reciprocal conversation
- expressing feelings
- empathy
- friendship skills
- greetings
- self regulation
- pragmatics of language
- cooperative play skills

Groups run for six weeks and meet for one hour per week. Please call for start dates and times.
